What the Sky Holds

Crows fold themselves
through thin winter sky
just before dawn,
take night with them
as they fly towards the sun,
leaving the moon
to find its own way.

The same crows gather
climb up sky
just before dusk,
follow the winter sun
to their roost, find
stillness when the moon
becomes itself again.

by Tere Foley